Dear columnists,

This year begins with a strong tone from the most memorial events. Where tragedies pile up one after another, as if they were ornaments placed one by one in a dresser.

After all, for some of us, the year begins with fear in our eyes, a knot in the stomach for athletes and entrepreneurs. For others, it is the crisis before the catastrophe, chaos before ruin, misfortune before collapse.

Why fear catastrophe, ruin, and failure when you are already halfway through the crisis of chaos and misfortune?

After the rise to power of a specter straight from hell, who proclaims a duty he does not have, whom he shouts from right to left and from here to there, claiming to be sovereign of a nation that does not even acknowledge him. He cries out to the entire world that he is the sole leader of a death squad that obeys him blindly, and yet does not grant him a single glance. He claims to be the heir of a throne that does not belong to him. He declares again and again, recklessly, that he is the only leader of this land, which I must clarify is not promised to him and never will be.

But what can we do, my dear listeners? How can we awaken a sleeping person when that person can only dream and never rise? Even if ten blows were inflicted upon him, he would still be sleeping and would not move an inch. After the fall of the Venezuelan government, we make way for the arrival of a being most greedy for spirit and power, who terrorizes his own country and causes his people to agonize. That same people suffer the consequences of their choice. We cannot blame human stupidity, for it is an invariable trait that defines us. We can only witness its consequences, those same consequences that strike us with a sob of terror, sparing us nothing from the suffering of living with it. Yes, my dear readers, that same person is a wound that only wants and can gnaw at you more and more. His sole purpose is to destroy you, eradicate you, and make you disappear forever. He represents no one, and no one resembles him. His soul embraces no other soul but his own. He is and wants to be the only one tormenting your mind, the one and only person who makes you lose your temper. He does everything to leave a permanent mark on your life. He is a tumor that eats away at you. That is what he is to all of you.

My dear friends, it is already time for us to say goodbye, but above all, see you very soon for new columns.
